

Mrs. Susan K. Tolley Answers The Question “Why Listen To Me?” In The Following Manner:

“We are in the field of education. We talk a lot about continuous learning, that we should be lifelong learners. Therefore we, maybe more than most, should be in the business of listening and learning. We should always be listening for something new, for something to refresh us, for something for us to think about. If you don't listen for that, shame on you; if I don't provide that, then shame on me.”

Mrs. Susan K. Tolley is an educator with over 30 years of experience. Having worked at virtually every level in the public school arena, Mrs. Tolley is an ambassador for public education. Now as a much sought after consultant and trainer, she provides professional development that is on-going, experiential, collaborative, and connected to and derived from working with students and understanding their culture. One of her mottos is “Great teachers help create great students!”

She is happily married to Steve, proudly remembers every student she ever taught, and enjoys the time she spends with her grandsons, Zack and Will. Her very favorite word is whenever either of the two boys say, “Ganny...”
